NUTSHELL

MAIN FALL IN ITHACA CORNELL

ITHACA, N. Y., is charmingly situated on a plain and surrounding hills at the head of Cayuga Lake. This lake is 378 feet above sea level. Ithaca is prettily laid out, has a resident population of 13,136 and is a prosperous community in every way.

ITHACA
HIGH SCHOOL

THE social life which always centres around a great university extends to the "town" here, the best of feeling existing between the student body and the citizens, greatly aiding to make Ithaca a charming place withal.

NO UNIVERSITY is more picturesquely situated than Cornell, situated as it is on a hill overlooking the valley and lake. There are about five hundred acres in the grounds, the buildings and campus covering about a hundred acres. There are over twenty substantial buildings used for the purposes of instruction.

THERE were 3,640 students enrolled at Cornell in 1904, and the desire of Ezra Cornell to found "an institution where any person can find instruction in any study" is fast being accomplished.

CORNELL has special advantages for the development of athletics. About fifty acres of its grounds are devoted to athletic field and play ground. The advantages of the lake have been such that Cornell has become renowned for its aquatic supremacy.

THE PRESENT CORNELL NAVY BOAT HOUSE

THE prospect of lake and hill as seen from the University is perhaps unmatched for beauty, and the falls and gorges are grand and wild enough to be picturesque.
